Description

The Department of Asian and North African Studies at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia invites applications for a fellowship in:

- Titolo: Sources for an environmental history of Western Asia: the Pilgrimage diaries
- SSD e/o settore concorsuale: L-OR/10, L-OR-14;
- Responsabile scientifico e tutor: Prof. Simone Cristoforetti
- Durata: 12 mesi
- Abstract: The project aims to collect and analyze environmental information preserved in the Farsi (Neo-Persian) Pilgrimage (Hajj) diaries composed between the late eighteenth and early twentieth centuries. These sources, numbering around a hundred, have only recently become accessible to scholars. The researcher will work on a pre-selected corpus of pilgrimage diaries to identify and organize all information related to the environments traversed by the authors. These diaries are valuable on two levels: historical-anthropological and historical-climatological. On one hand, the corpus is crucial for understanding the relationship with the environment at the dawn of the environmental crisis and the onset of European modernity across a vast area from Central Asia and the Indian Subcontinent to the Arabian Peninsula, with particular attention to the historical and cultural value of water. The researcher's study will take the form of a historical anthropology investigation focusing on two main areas: A) the pilgrims' engagement with the landscape and their mindscapes; B) transformations in the human-environment relationship during key historical transitions like the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. On the other hand, in a region lacking natural archives useful for climate history, the diaries become an essential archive of societies, as evidenced by similar studies on travel diaries from other global regions. The research findings will result in:
 - 1) An essay (in the form of an article or book) aimed at providing a historical-anthropological overview of the pilgrims' perspectives on the environment, utilizing the personal, varied, and gendered perspectives these sources offer.
 - 2) A report organizing data relevant for a potential climatological history of the area towards the end of the Little Ice Age (14th-19th centuries), including observations on snow, water sources, crop maturation, and prices. The researcher will collaborate with colleagues from DAIS, and the open-source report could be hosted on the MAP website.
 - 3) Organization of a dedicated event.

The research may be carried out in English.
