PROJECT SUMMARY:

The Chair "Digitalisation in EU Financial Law" develops new teaching, pedagogical, research and policy engagement activities on the EU's approaches to digitalization of financial services. It aims to do so in seven ways:

- Offering a critical discussion of the policy and regulatory challenges the EU is facing in dealing with financial innovation to further market integration and risk sharing in the internal financial market;
- Studying the role of financial innovation in EU market integration and the capital markets union in a multidisciplinary fashion, by integrating insights from law, economics and finance;
- Adopting innovative teaching techniques as to enrich the learning experience and promote active participation in class (i.e. case studies, seminars, study trips, data analysis);
- Setting up a digital platform (ad hoc website) to make the educational resources and tools which are produced in the context of the DigiFinLaw Chair (documents, WPs, media and other materials) freely available for the public;
- Strengthening civil society's shared knowledge of the EU by organising open events ("the financial user 2.0" – public round-table seminars for civil society) that make citizens familiar with essential political and legal frameworks and leave them better equipped to utilize the EU more actively;
- Fostering fruitful cooperation between academia and policy-makers by organizing seminars and a final conference targeting financial community, EU regulatory agencies and supervisors at local, national and European level;

- allowing Ca' Foscari University of Venice to raise its profile in European Union studies, and benefit from the networks established between the financial community and the project team members, leading to further cooperation in teaching, research and debating activities.
