If a student breaks the laws of the People's Republic of China or the regulations of the host University, the CNU International Students Office reserves the right to revoke the support and the student will have to pay the fees at CNU.

Should the Beijing Municipal Authority, for reasons non-depending on the University, stop issuing the support, students undertake to pay the enrolment fees at both Universities.

Should the student fail to pass one or more profit exams, CNU may charge an extra fee.

The support paid by the municipality of Beijing does not cover the administrative costs of submission of the application and registration with CNU, of approximately 800 RMB, which is due by the participants upon arrival at CNU.

Ca' Foscari University of Venice undertakes to evaluate the recognition of credits acquired at CNU during the 4th year of the degree programme for a possible subsequent enrolment in a Master's degree programme pertaining to the Department of Asian and Mediterranean African Studies, allowing for a shortened academic path.
