Abstract	Starting from the theme of the project, which is “Labour and legality in the society of inclusion”, the Research Unit in Venice means to examine from a compared-international perspective the system of offences prevention, control and repression. 1) Focus on the analysis of the international context and its characteristics, in order to deepen skills, criticalities and strategies of the ILO in terms of controls and sanctions. Afterwards, the focus will be moved to the challenges given by globalisation and the transformation of work and business organisation. 2) Afterwards, the project will compare national systems; in particular, a comparison between Europe and South Africa/South America. This analysis is useful to assess whether and how countries meet international standards and get aligned to ILO’S regulatory policies. In particular, the focus will be placed on control systems (subjects, functions, tools), prevention system of offences and sanction profiles, role of social parties.
